

Anti-Money Laundering (AML) Monitoring Guidelines

Financial institutions must implement transaction monitoring systems to detect suspicious patterns that may indicate money laundering activities.

Guideline AML-01 – Large Transaction Monitoring

Transactions exceeding regulatory thresholds must be automatically flagged for AML review.

Guideline AML-02 – Structuring Detection

Repeated transactions just below reporting thresholds may indicate structuring behavior and must be monitored closely.

Guideline AML-03 – High Risk Jurisdictions

Transactions involving countries identified as high risk for financial crime require enhanced due diligence.

Guideline AML-04 – Suspicious Activity Reporting (SAR)

When suspicious patterns are detected, institutions must file Suspicious Activity Reports with relevant regulatory authorities.

Guideline AML-05 – Customer Risk Profiling

Financial institutions must maintain risk profiles for customers and evaluate transactions against expected behavioral patterns.
